

Ronald W. White

Born in Covington, Kentucky in 1950, Mr. White received his J.D. from the University of Kentucky in 1980. He served in various assignments with the U.S. Army over a 32 year active duty career, including tours in Germany, Korea, and Vietnam. Before retiring in 2003, Mr. White had served in numerous criminal and administrative law positions, including as a prosecutor, a defense counsel, and a military trial judge, as well as the Chief, Criminal Law Division, and the Chief, Administrative Law Division, OTJAG.

After leaving active duty, Mr. White served as a commissioner to Chief Judge Susan Crawford, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces for two years. He then served two years as the Supervisory Interlocutory Appeals Attorney and then Senior Staff Attorney in the Office of Military Commissions, Department of Defense.

From 2010 to 2012, in the Office of Chief Prosecutor, U.S. Military Commissions, Mr. White co-presented training in rules of evidence, rules of procedure, and trial tactics on a weekly basis. Since February 2012, Mr. White has served as a subject matter expert, consultant, and instructor in evidence, procedure, and tactics, with a primary focus on criminal defense in sexual assault cases, with the U.S. Army Trial Defense Service.

Mr. White is an adjunct professor in trial advocacy at The George Washington University Law School and has taught trial advocacy at the Virginia CLE's National Trial Advocacy College since 2008.

Mr. White is licensed to practice in Kentucky (1980), and has been admitted to practice before the U.S. Supreme Court (1985) and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces (2004).
