

James Whitehead has been a staff attorney at the Public Defender Service for the District of Columbia (PDS) since 2004, where he has served in both the Trial and Appellate Divisions. He currently is a supervising attorney within the Trial Division where he both supervises junior attorneys and represents clients charged with homicides, sexual assaults, and other serious felonies. Mr. Whitehead has conducted numerous criminal defense trainings, primarily for members of the Washington D.C. Criminal Defense Bar. Mr. Whitehead is also a member of PDS's Forensic Practice Group, which focuses on the use of forensics, such as DNA, fingerprints, ballistics, etc., in criminal trials.